

Lincoln's Inn, London

Client: The Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn
Date: 2014-present

Working with Rick Mather Architects

The development of an underground library extension and new library annex has required a review of the Benchers' border, Great Hall terrace and garden front.

Our role is to help the Inn of Court think through the potential changes and how they should fit into the wider context of the whole of Lincoln's Inn. This includes what this landscape needs to achieve for the work of the Inn and for those that visit.

The change to a terrace or border may not seem to make much impact, but as you review the options these decisions will have ripple effects all over the rest of the landscape and could help to solve inherent issues in layout and movement patterns.

In solving these we can see how the landscape could come together as a whole and truly add value to the work of the Inn.

Renderers courtesy of Rick Mather Architects

